Allan Stephenson is an artist who draws his inspiration from the natural landscape, particularly that of his native British Isles and also that of the Pacific Northwest where he now makes his home.

"I am always looking for and attempting to communicate with the viewer that special sense of place that infuses some areas of the natural world with meaning, wonder and beauty. I hope my work can provide some escape from the sometime frantic world we all live in. I am a traditionalist. I don't see the art I produce as breaking any kind of new ground but rather I apply myself to existing forms and attempt to inject perhaps fresh content. I am currently enjoying the medium of pastel for it's direct hands of quality that allows me to blend and sculpt the pigment using my fingers and hands rather than the intermediary of a brush."
